THE PLAN. First, the European Canadian people have to be preserved: we as individuals need to get out of the big cities and move to homogenous rural areas across the country, buy land, raise families. This will happen in all provinces, not just in one spot. 1/7

Facts!! Black Canadians aren't running around screaming "racism". The Libs act like we live in the U.S.A. Racism is here, for sure but, not at the level they're projecting. This is designed to piss off white Canadians, and turn blacks into entitled racists. This is BLM II.

Space exploration is a White male endeavor, and almost all the greatest physicists and astronomers in history were White Men. Africans never interested in exploration. White males mapped the entire earth, climbed highest mountains, 100% of explorers.

Your excepting the antiWhite(you call leftists) narrative right now. If someone called someone else a murderer and claimed "nah bro. Its just a word. I don't mean your literally a murderer" that wouldn't be acceptable and accepting that label would be stupid on that persons part.

The problem, Mr. Poletine, is that they need to create issues like this because their underlying narrative is anti-White; the CBC - as a wing of state propaganda - has an obligation to generate accusatory stories about White Canadians.

Asking why racialized people vote for a racist like Donald Trump is a blinkered question

By Shree Paradkar Race & Gender Columnist

Another story lies in a demographic that points to the future. The youth vote. Sixty-two per cent of voters aged 18 to 29 voted for Biden and 35 per cent for Trump, according to the New York Times exit poll. Of those youth, only 8 per cent are white, and they voted for Trump by a slim majority of 51 per cent. America is getting younger and browner.

Skin-color preferences and body satisfaction among 100 South Asian-Canadian and 100 European-Canadian female university students were examined. South Asian-Canadian females were found to desire lighter skin than they possessed and had lower body satisfaction compared with European-Canadian females. Among South Asian-Canadians, the desire to be lighter skinned was greater the more participants differed from the cultural White ideal. Light- and medium-skinned South Asian-

Canadians had the highest and lowest levels of body satisfaction, respectively.

CULTURE, STRESS, AND COPING Internally- and Externally-Targeted Control Strategies of European Canadians, East Asian Canadians, and Japanese

Two studies examined internally and externally targeted control strategies in response to life stressors in European Canadians, East Asian Canadians, and Japanese. In Study 1, European Canadian, East Asian Canadian, and sojourning Japanese university students in Canada recalled a stressful life event and reported their coping strategies. Respondents also reported current and retrospective self-evaluations that allowed assessment of perceived self-changes over time. Study 2 included East Asian Canadian and European Canadian university students in Canada and Japanese university students in Japan. Both studies revealed that several types of internally targeted control strategies were more prevalent among East Asian participants but that a particular type of internally targeted control strategy, self-enhancing interpretive control, was more prevalent among people with Western English-speaking backgrounds.

Why Do Westerners Self-Enhance More than East Asians?

CARL F. FALK¹, STEVEN J. HEINE^{1*},
MASAKI YUKI² and KOSUKE TAKEMURA²

¹University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada

²Hokkaido University, Sapporo, Japan

Abstract

Much research finds that Westerners self-enhance more than East Asians, with the exception of studies using the implicit associations test for self-esteem (IATSE). We contrasted Japanese and Canadians on a new measure of self-enhancement under low- and high-attentional load to assess whether cultural differences vary across controlled and automatic processes. Participants also completed measures of relational mobility and the IATSE. Results indicated that Japanese and Asian-Canadians were more self-critical than Euro-Canadians, both under high- and low-attentional load. This cultural difference was partially mediated by relational mobility. The IATSE showed no cultural differences, but this measure did not positively correlate with any of the other measures in the study, suggesting that it is not a valid measure of 'true' self-feelings. European-Canadians

In 1986, about 78 percent of Canadians were descended from people of European ethnicity. The short summaries that follow present information on the population, distribution, Migration history, and cultural persistence of thirty-three European ethnic groups in Canada. Appended to many of these summaries are short lists of publications, most of which are recent studies of a particular ethnic community or a general historical or cultural survey of the ethnic group. The population information in these summaries for 1981 is taken from the 1981 census of Canada, and that for 1986, from the estimates (based on a 20 percent sample) from the 1986 census of Canada as reported in the Canada Year Book 1990,
